More Rate Cutting

OMAHA, May 9.—The Union Pacific [illegible] tired of waiting for [illegible] rate trouble in Colorado, took a hand in the matter and made [illegible] Orders were issued this morning [illegible] tickets from Utah common points to Colorado common points for $[illegible] The prevailing rates have been $[illegible] Officials at headquarters refused to talk about the reduction except to give out the news that it had been made.

All the general [illegible] agents of the roads interested [illegible] Nebraska maximum rate law are present at a conference being held at the Union Pacific headquarters to-day.

THE SITUATION IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, May 9.—[illegible] Passenger Agent Nickerson of the Santa Fe has written to General Passenger Agent Charlton of the Alton, calling attention to the fact that the Santa Fe has been dividing its through Colorado-Chicago business with the Alton at Kansas City. The cut rate now in effect [illegible] the round trip between these points—makes only $10 for the round trip from Denver to Kansas City if the $30 rate east of the Missouri river is adhered to. He then [illegible] the Alton to pro rate with the Santa Fe on the cut. If it will not do so the Santa Fe will have to send all the business over its own lines to Chicago via Burton to St. Louis. The Alton has replied that it is a party to the Western Passenger Association agreement to maintain the [illegible] rate, and until forced by the action of the members of the Association themselves to recede it must maintain that rate. It will not be a party to the demoralization now going on until every resource for its settlement has been exhausted.

Increasing concern is manifested by the western roads over the continuance of the Denver and Rio Grande-Santa Fe fight. It means for all of them heavy financial losses on account of a quarrel in which they have no interest. Most of them are of the opinion that the question at issue is not of such a nature as to justify the fight that is being made over it. Whatever the merits of the claims of the respective combatants may be independent roads profess to be unable to see why the Burlington and the Rock Island should make it possible for the Rio Grande to carry the war beyond its own immediate territory. These roads could certainly prevent the Denver and Rio Grande from carrying its cuts east of Denver but it would be at the expense of their California outlet. Their alternative is to support the Rio Grande, or go out of the California business, if they do not feel inclined to go back on their former action in regard to their former [illegible] on that business and their refusal to accept the terms of the Union Pacific in regard thereto. Rumors are in circulation that the roads have a surprise in store, that when it is sprung will put an end to the difficulty, but none of the officials of either of them is willing to admit that there is any foundation for such rumors.

Reports from passenger agents in all sections of western territory are wonderfully unanimous on one point. They all agree that the lightness of the traffic to the World's Fair is almost entirely due to the reports that have gone out concerning the unfinished condition of the Fair, the extortions of the concessionaires, the insolence of the Columbian guards and the other criticisms that the Chicago papers have made upon the management. People at a distance are wholly unable to understand how the Fair can be incomplete and still contain far [illegible] for them to examine than they can [illegible] visiting the Exposition every day for a week. These reports all state that any number of people are waiting to come to the Fair, but they will not come so long as the reports of the nature referred to continue to be published.

Fast Railroad Time

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 9.—The new Columbian engine No. 999 of the New York Central drew the Empire State express from Syracuse to Buffalo to-day. East of Syracuse the train had lost twenty five minutes on account of the foaming boiler and it left Syracuse twenty three minutes late, leaving Rochester at 4:15. Engineer Hogan set out to make up part of time between Rochester and Buffalo and when it had not been intended to make any effort at special time, he broke all known records in covering that section of the road. The sixty nine miles were traversed in sixty-eight minutes, without making allowance for the stop at Batavia. Between Looneyville and Grimesville, there is a level stretch of land for five miles and over. This distance the train covered in three and one half minutes, or at the rate of a mile in 42 seconds. Between Grimesville and the Forks, one mile was covered in 35 seconds or 100 miles an hour. News of the trip reached Buffalo before the train and a big crowd gathered to see it come in.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—As a result of the discussion in the cabinet to-day of the [illegible] condition of affairs existing in Nicaragua arising out of the revolution, the United States warship Atlanta has been ordered to proceed immediately to Greytown on the eastern coast of Nicaragua to protect American interests in that country, especially in connection with the work on the canal.

The gold reserve, which has for the past two weeks been below, was to-day made intact again by the West.

Secretary Carlisle accepted the gold offered from St. Louis, $2,000,000, which with the gold in the treasury makes the total $100,[illegible] or $[illegible] free gold.

Denver's Police Board.

DENVER, May 9.—Governor Waite stated this morning that he did not think the time had arrived for him to take a hand in the police board affairs, but said that as soon as the time was ripe he would act. He is conducting an investigation in his own way and it is possible that something will drop before he gets through.

A Disastrous Fire.

UTICA, N. Y., May 9.—A disastrous fire visited [illegible] this morning. Early this morning [illegible] young man made some purchases in the large dry goods store of J. B. Wells & Co., and just before going out lit a match to light his cigar. The flame of the match set fire to some mosquito netting, and in less than a minute the whole department was ablaze.

The clerks, eighty in number, most of them females, became panic-stricken and several fainted. They were dragged out with difficulty. Three women in the carpet department on the second floor were hemmed in by the flames. A Flood Threatened.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 9.—The whole Mississippi Valley from Cairo to New Orleans is threatened with the most disastrous overflow in its history. The river continues to rise [illegible] and from present indications it will go to the highest point ever reached. The water is over a foot above the danger line at Memphis and two feet more are expected. The levees below Memphis are intact except in Desha county, Arkansas, where the whole country has been flooded and the Missouri Pacific track submerged to a depth of several feet. Railroad traffic in that section has been indefinitely suspended. The river above Memphis has left its banks and the whole of Mississippi county, Arkansas, is flooded.

The Warner Failure.

NEW YORK, May 9.—H. H. Warner's attorney, Mr. Briggs, says that Mr. Warner's liabilities will amount to several hundred thousand dollars. Business men estimate them at $500,000. His assets consist of his interest in the H. H. Warner company of London, the H. H. Warner company of Rochester, the Industrial and Mining Guarantee company of New York and other concerns. He owns 41,000 shares out of a total of 55,000 shares of the Warner company of London, the capital stock of which is $2,000,000. His holdings in other companies are not so large.

Mr. Warner's homestead and other pieces of real estate are under mortgage of $1,000,000 to the Bank of Monroe county.

A Spanish Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Members of the diplomatic corps in Washington expect that in the course of a few months the Spanish government will elevate the legation in Washington to the grade of an embassy with a corresponding promotion of rank to the incumbent. Whether or not the Duke of Veragua will be appointed ambassador as a Chicago dispatch states is probable, no one in this city can say.

NAPOLEON APPROACHING ELBA.

A Pathetic Incident on the Way to Church on the Island.

Having made all sail and shaped our course for Elba, Napoleon became very impatient to see it and asked if we had every sail set. I told him we had set all that could be of any use. He said, "Were you in chase of an enemy's frigate, should you make more sail?" I looked, and seeing that the starboard topgallant stunsail was not set, observed that if I were in chase of an enemy I should certainly carry it. He replied that if it could be of use in that case it might be so now. I mention this anecdote to show what a close observer he was. In fact nothing escaped him. When the man stationed at the masthead hailed the deck that Elba was right ahead, he became exceedingly impatient, went forward to the forecastle, and as soon as the land could be seen from the deck was very particular in inquiring what colors were flying on the batteries.

He seemed to doubt the garrison's having given in their adhesion to the Bourbons, and it appears not without some reason, as they had in fact done so only during the preceding 48 hours, so that if we had had a fair wind I should have found the island in the hands of the enemy, and consequently must have taken my charge to the commander in chief, who would no doubt have ordered us to England. On nearing Elba General Drouot, Comte Clam (aid-de-camp to Prince Schwarzenberg) and Lieutenant Hastings, the first lieutenant of the Undaunted, were sent ashore, commissioned by Napoleon to take possession of the island. Colonel Campbell accompanied them. They were conducted to the house of General Dalheme, who had received orders from the provisional government only two days before, in consequence of which he and his troops had given in their adhesion to Louis XVIII and had hoisted the white flag.

The general expressed his desire to do whatever should be agreeable to the emperor. He had a book with all the ancient and modern flags of Tuscany. He asked my opinion of that which he had chosen. It was a white flag, with a red band running diagonally through it, with three bees on the band—the bees were in his arms as emperor of France. He then requested me to allow the ship's tailor to make two—one of them to be hoisted on the batteries at 1 o'clock. At 2 p. m. the barge was manned. He begged me to show him the way down the side of the vessel, which I did, and was soon followed by the emperor, Baron Koller, Comte Bertrand and Comte Clam.

The yards being manned, we fired a royal salute, as did two French corvettes which were lying in the harbor at that time. The ship was surrounded by boats with the principal inhabitants and bands of music on board. The air resounded with shouts of "Vive l'empereur! Vive Napoleon!" On landing he was received by the prefect, the clergy and all the authorities, and the keys were presented to him on a plate, upon which he made a complimentary speech to the prefect, the people welcoming him with loud acclamations.

We proceeded to the church through a double file of soldiers, and thence to the Hotel de Ville, where the principal inhabitants were assembled, with several of whom he conversed. Remarking an old soldier in the crowd (he was a sergeant I believe, and wore the order of the Legion of Honor), he called him to him and recollected having given him that decoration on the field of battle at Eylau. The old soldier shed tears, the idea of being remembered by his emperor fairly overcame him. He felt, I doubt not, that it was the proudest day of his life. Napoleon afterward mounted a horse, and, attended by a dozen persons visited some of the outworks, having before leaving the ship, invited me to dine with him at 7 o'clock. I ordered all my wine and stock to be handed to him for his use, the island being destitute of provisions of that sort.—Thomas Ussher, R. N., in Century.

An Instance of Reckless Bravery.

Secretary Herbert tells the following: My regiment had charged right up among the guns of a Union battery, whose men and horses had nearly all been killed. There was one gun to which four horses had been attached. The two rear horses had been shot down in harness. The two leaders were apparently unhurt, and on one of them sat a lad, head erect, vigorously plying his whip on the other horse and striving to save his gun. He was devoting his whole soul to that purpose, utterly unmindful of our men, who were surging about him.

He was literally like the Casabianca of the flaming deck. I could have touched him with my sword and was just about to beg him to surrender when shots rang out from behind me, and he dropped from his horse, dead as he fell. He might have saved himself, but he seemed determined to save that gun or die. It was sublime, but I can never think of it without a shudder at the horrors of the [illegible] of that [illegible] Washington S[illegible]

WORK OF CHURCH.

The [illegible] Annual Meeting of the Congregational Churches.

GOOD REPORTS AND ADDRESSES

Other Local News A Baptist Children's Entertainment A Frolic of the Holidays Matters of Interest in the Courts.

The [illegible] meeting of the Arkansas Valley association of Congregational churches was auspiciously opened at the Congregational church in Manitou yesterday afternoon. There was a good attendance from Colorado Springs and outside cities. Rev. W. G. Mann was made moderator and H. M. Lyman scribe.

Reverends M. D. Orites, A. O. Downs and Upson, were appointed committee on credentials.

Reports from various churches were then heard. Colorado Springs first church was reported in good condition and the Y. P. S. C. E. doing an especially valuable work. The second church reported a better attendance than formerly, finances in good condition and outlook generally hopeful. Manitou noted an improvement in church building and good condition otherwise.

Revs. C. M. Sanders, J. B. Williams and H. M. Lyman were named as honorary members. Various committees were appointed. Superintendent Saunders gave an interesting report upon Home Missions, and Mrs. Fitch read a report from Superintendent Fitch upon Sunday School work.

The evening session was devoted to a symposium upon "The Church and the Moral Problems of the Town." President W. F. Slocum of Colorado College was the first speaker and in his excellent address covered the subject very fully. He spoke of four vicious evils which were abroad in every large town and with which the Church had to deal, viz. the saloon, gambling house, brothel and a certain form of ignorance. There were two ways in which to meet these, by the ballot and through the courts. Of these latter he said one of two things is true, either they are false or else they have a divine purpose. We can use them and the Church must use them. He laid stress upon the fact that many men failed to vote and thereby allowed the lower and less educated classes to control the affairs of the country. He thought a man should be punished for refusing to vote. Every man owes it to himself and to the State to do what he can to suppress the evils mentioned.

The speaker then by an interesting anecdote illustrated the difference between faith and belief, in the story of two men in the war of 1812. One supposed the enemy had landed, but the other shouldered his musket and went down to meet them. The thing for every man to do was to shoulder his musket and go forth to meet these enemies of society.

Rev. H. E. Peabody in a very effective way told of some practical work which was being done in Trinidad. The town had a great many saloons. School children were obliged to pass by them and they were a menace to good citizenship. So the churches had banded together against a common foe. They had committees in each church, the people were aroused and educated. There was a good organization formed and the [illegible] being controlled as never before. The speaker [illegible] heavily against the indifference so common in many communities. In Trinidad [illegible] of facts were [illegible] the strongest kind of argument. It was the evil as a whole and not individuals that [illegible] Indifference, laziness and self interest were great difficulties in the way of suppressing the evils.

The [illegible] speaker was Rev. Mr. Alden of London, who gave an interesting talk upon his work in the slums of that great city. He told of his workingmen's clubs, of the good they were doing. His idea was to get all converts to work. Personal work among the poor was essential. He believed in a religion not among the [illegible] but upon earth every day in the week. He [illegible] sympathy for aristocratic [illegible] the [illegible] to do missionary work.

A Birthday Party

"[illegible] Frolic of the Holidays" was the name given to a very pretty little entertainment at the Baptist church [illegible] evening. There were several scores of children daintily dressed to represent various flowers and [illegible] and to illustrate the holidays which come from January to December. They all [illegible] of the year, [illegible] presided by Miss Hodge, who, arrayed in a robe of white, sat upon a throne.

The children came in in groups and sang or spoke selections to carry out the idea of the Holiday which they represented. One of the prettiest numbers was that of May Day, and the [illegible] of the day was appropriately crowned. Each of the other groups did excellently and the whole entertainment was thoroughly delightful.

District Court.

The following business was transacted in the District Court yesterday:

Dor[illegible] vs. Southcott; demurrer [illegible] and plaintiffs given ten days to amend their complaint.

Williams & Woods vs. McCleeky; default and judgment for $[illegible] The Consolidated Coffee Co.; default and judgment for $325.09.

The grand jury made a report and returned true bills against C. A. Martin, receiving stolen goods; Frank Kuhn, murder; James R[illegible], murder; William Bell, rape and incest, two counts; James M. Scott, forgery; Jeptha Pianon, rape; C. A. Jackson, burglary; William Clayton, arson; George Williams, burglary; Martin Johnson, grand larceny; Hal Waters, burglary; John Stevens, grand larceny, two counts.

Court adjourned until 9:30 this morning, when the prisoners will probably be arraigned.

A Pacific Storm.

SYDNEY, N. W. S., May 9.—The mail brings the details of a hurricane which swept the New Hebrides. The whole settlement at the port of Sandwich was obliterated and half of New Caledonia was submerged. At Tchio the floods washed 10,000 tons of nickel ore into the sea and filled the mines with water and wreckage. The coffee plantations were swept clean. The natives are shelterless and destitute.

A Small Earthquake.

MADISON, S. D., May 9.—This section was visited by an earthquake at 5 o'clock this morning. The shock lasted [illegible] minute. Houses were shaken and people awakened. No damage.

At Howard a distinct shock of earthquake was felt at 5 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Bartley appealed to the chairman.

The chairman decided that the words were admissible.

Mr. Gladstone thereupon denounced the amendment as obviously intended to pass a slight upon the Irish legislature and implying distrust of that legislature on the part of Parliament. After considerable debate the amendment was rejected by a vote of 292 to 237.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Money on call has been easy, ranging from 5 to 6, last loan at 5 and closing offered at 5.

The stock market was erratic in its movements throughout the day. There were sharp rallies at intervals, but the tendency of prices in the main were downward, owing to reports that the government crop report to be issued to-morrow will be most unfavorable and the collapse of the Chemical National bank of Chicago, which led to rumors affecting the credit of other financial institutions of that city.

The lowest quotations were touched after delivery hour. During the last 15 minutes of business a rally of ¼ to ½ per cent. occurred and the market left off steadier in tone at the rally. The borrowing demand was unusually active, showing that an extra large short interest exists. Cordage Preferred and Burlington commanded ⅛ per diem for use, and W. U., Rock Island, St. Paul and Louisville and Nashville lent flat. The sales aggregated 333,922 shares.

Exchange on London 4.85@4.85½; sight drafts, 4.88@4.88½. Bar silver 83½.

A Theater Orchestra.

Here is a story W. F. Blaud tells about an occurrence no farther away than in Lo[illegible], Ind.:

"An advance agent not many years ago I had to arrange for a company at Dolan's theater, and so, after the custom, it became necessary for me to ascertain all the particulars about the theater, depth of stage, height of grooves, etc., and among these how many pieces were in the orchestra. So I put the question to Dolan.

"'Orchestra? Pieces?' repeated Dolan. Then he paused a second and then emphatically said, 'Three.'

"'What?' I exclaimed. 'Only three pieces in your orchestra?'

"'Yes, sir, three—piano, stool and cover.'"—New York Press.

How to Preserve Leaves and Plants.

To preserve leaves and other parts of plants properly they should be placed between sheets of blotting paper, and the papers should be changed once a day for two or three days. They should be dried as rapidly as possible by passing a warm flat-iron over the paper each time the change is made. They should be kept under moderate pressure at first, and to insure even pressing it will be well to place a stiff piece of card board or straw board at intervals between the sheets. When the drying appears to be well advanced, the pressure on the specimens may be increased.—Brooklyn Eagle.

AN ADVOCATE OF ASSASSINATION.

The National Populist the official organ of the Farmers Alliance of Colorado, openly advocates the assassination of its political opponents. In its issue of May 6, at the foot of its first editorial column, it [illegible] a telegraph dispatch in relation to a [illegible] of the Supreme Court of K[illegible] g two Republ[illegible] from the [illegible] Board of Railway C[illegible]

"[illegible] above is [illegible] first [illegible] in the [illegible] of K[illegible] a Republican court failed to [illegible] By [illegible] goes into [illegible] Relics of the fighting dev[illegible] to carry his point.

We would just like to have some spiritual [illegible] to [illegible] Anthony's trail. Some [illegible] in a bumptious manner—[illegible] will find it.

"[illegible] removal [illegible] as Geo. T. Anthony from the political atmosphere of K[illegible] will prove the best friend of [illegible]"

This is rather more openly anarchistic than the usual utterances of the Populists but its contempt for law and its [illegible] defiance of morality is nothing new.

THE BERING ARBITRATION.

The strength of the American case as developed before the Bering Sea commission has led some of our people to the conclusion that a mistake was made in submitting a question where we were so evidently right to the chances of arbitration. Such an opinion can only arise from an entirely wrong view of the principle of arbitration. If we are to [illegible] to impartial judgment only when we are in the wrong or have a doubtful case, this method of settling international disputes will become extremely rare. The object of arbitration is to provide a method of settling questions upon which opposite views are taken by two nations both of whom are quite certain that they are right.

In the present case Americans were convinced of the justice of their claims before the court met, and the development of their case has strongly confirmed this opinion, but the English and Canadians were equally well convinced that the claims made by the United States were unreasonable, and it is fair to presume that something can be said in support of their opinion.

It is said that England in any event would not have gone to war in order to defend the privileges of the Canadian sealers, but this has nothing to do with the justice of the American claims or with the superiority of arbitration to a more summary settlement of the question. The settlement of international disputes between England and the United States by arbitration, involving such questions as the Alabama claims, the northwest boundary and the Newfoundland fisheries has been an example to the world of tremendous influence, and it would be a crime against civilization if the policy were now abandoned. If the case of the United States is evidently a just one, it is all the more reason why we should be willing to submit it to the judgment of an impartial court.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S REVOLT

There is at last a President of the United States who has had the courage to declare himself independent of the office seekers. Sufficient evidence of the wisdom of this declaration is to be found in the general admission that it will be made a precedent and that future Presidents will adopt as a matter of course the policy which was forced upon President Cleveland.

The wonder is that this policy was not adopted long ago. We can readily see how when the country consisted of only a few million people in a score of States [illegible] imported with ideas of republican simplicity that the President should be accessible to all, and that the humblest citizen should have the same right to [illegible] over the affairs of public policy [illegible] he was personally con[illegible] as [illegible] by the [illegible] of the nation's leaders. But with the growth of the population to more than the [illegible] and the [illegible] to [illegible] Forty States [illegible] it was only a matter of time when it would become a physical impossibility for the President to perform this work in the same way that it was done by the earlier Presidents. If he should work without stopping day and night, Sundays and all days, and if he should multiply himself into a dozen men of equal industry, he would still be unequal to the impossible task. Yet up to May 8, 1893, the Presidents have attempted to perform as much of it as they could, and the result has been in every instance a neglect of other far more important matters of public policy and more than once it has resulted in serious physical injury from overwork to the person attempting it.

Under the new plan personal interviews with office seekers will be avoided, recommendations will be made in writing or entrusted to Senators and Representatives and the President will be spared for work of more importance. It is however evident that the remedy is not yet sufficient. No doubt the President will be greatly relieved but he will have too much to do in this direction. What is needed and what is bound to come before long is the removal of the appointing power from the President except in the few cases where the offices are of sufficient importance to exercise a direct control on the policy of the administration. If civil service is introduced throughout the departments wherever possible the matter will be settled in the best way but if the spoils system is to prevail in part let the President appoint a partisan board to select minor officers. The President who has been elected to direct the destinies of seventy millions of people can find more profitable work than examining into the qualifications of consuls, postmasters and custom house officers.

THE NICARAGUAN REVOLUTION

The recent revolution in the little Central American State of Nicaragua resembles nothing so much as a county seat war in Kansas. Granada, the oldest, and Leon, the largest city of the republic, have for many years been bitter rivals and each has sought the control of the government. The compromise by which the capital was located at Managua, a neutral point, has been unsuccessful in securing harmony, and the presidential elections have given frequent occasion for warlike disputes.

In the present case the president is a Leon man by the name of Sacaza and the ex president, Zavala of Granada, has headed an "insurrection" against him. There is about as much difference between Sacaza and Zavala as between Tweedledum and Tweedledee, and indeed the campaign is much more a political than a military one. The total force on both sides does not amount to much more than a thousand men. The principal part of the war is the "pronunciamentos," which are issued at frequent intervals by the rival leaders. Then there are frequent strategic marches and captures of towns (without opposition) and when the hostile armies meet, an accident [illegible] carefully provided against, both sides discharge their guns in the air and retreat in opposite directions.

So dramatic a method of political campaigning [illegible] specially attractive to the Spanish-Americans, and while occasionally there arises a leader who is really blood thirsty and cruel, yet, as a general rule, the "revolutions" are scarcely more dangerous and much less expensive than our own presidential campaigns.

A writer in a recent number of Garden and Forest calls attention to the special value of the elm as a shade tree for city streets and country roads. It is true that its high arching branches afford practical advantages besides giving it a place among the most beautiful of trees. Many of the most beautiful of eastern streets and parks are largely indebted to this tree, and probably all of our readers can remember some special example of its beauty both when alone or standing in rows. It is one of the trees which does well in Colorado under suitable conditions, and deserves the attention of all tree planters and tree lovers.

Governor Waite seems to have noticed the storm of indignation from the State press which followed his reprieve of a murderer until after the close of his term of office. The Governor explains that this does not mean that no murderers will be executed during his term of office and that it is his purpose to enforce the laws of the State. We are glad to learn that the Governor has a proper appreciation of the duties of his high office, but the fact remains that no reason has been alleged for the reprieve except his personal objection to capital punishment.

The Board of World's Fair Managers for Colorado requests the publishers of all newspapers magazines and periodicals in the State to kindly furnish one or more copies of their publication from May 1st to Oct. 31st, to be placed on file in the reading rooms of the Colorado Building, Exposition grounds. The American people do have considerable regard for the wishes of the Hawaiian people. But they have little for the members of the sham royalty and aristocracy of that isle. Princess Kaiulani and her advisers will serve their cause best by silence.

The indictment of Chas. A. Coryell by the Denver grand jury is a step towards official honesty and reform in municipal affairs. But it will be necessary to take a good many other steps before the desired result is reached.

Anesthesia From Torture

An extraordinary thing happened during Mr. Sency's last illness. While a friend was with him he was smitten with a violent attack of angina pectoris. It seemed as though his sufferings were more than the body could stand and survive. The paroxysm lasted for more than an hour. After it had passed he opened his eyes as one who awakes from a sound sleep and said to his friends, "Why, I have been asleep [illegible]" So that it seemed that the excess of pain and struggle had really produced a sort of anesthesia and the case will be discussed at a meeting of one of the medical faculties.—New York Cor Philadelphia Press

GAY GONDOLIERS.

JOYS OF BOATING AT THE GREAT CHICAGO EXPOSITION

The Elevated Electrical Railway Runs Almost Everywhere. Elegant Trips by Electric or Steam Launch or on the Gondolas. The Rolling Chairs.

WORLD'S FAIR, May 8—[Special.]—Fortunate indeed it was for the millions who are to see the great exposition that the projectors and managers provided ample facilities for travel to and fro within the grounds. Many of the people who come here have but a few days to spend. They want to see all that possibly may be seen in the short time at their command. Possibly they will start out to walk and do nothing but walk. In a day or two they will discover their mistake. It is poor economy to weary one's legs and muscles with pedestrianism and unfit one's self for continued exertions when both time and strength may be saved by a moderate outlay for conveyance by one or other of the many modes of travel within the enclosure.

There never was an exposition which afforded such pretty and pleasant means of getting about as this one does. More popular than any other method because comparatively inexpensive is the elevated electric railway which runs all through the grounds. It is itself an exhibit comprising as it does all the latest improvements in cars and power. Engines with a capacity of 2,500 horse power are used in propelling the thirty trains of cars to and fro. The cars are principally of the open variety and from their comfortable seats one may see all the outdoor show of the exposition—to many the best part of the entertainment. The elevated trains carry one past all the principal buildings, excepting only the Manufactures, the Electricity and the United States government structures. They afford excellent views of the lakes and lagoons, the wooded island, the great stock pavilion, all the state and foreign buildings, of the long pier running out into Lake Michigan with the steamers and pleasure craft lying by, of the brick gun boat which Uncle Sam placed here for the admiration of landsmen, and of almost everything within the grounds that is worth seeing outside the buildings except the plaza or court which lies in front of the Administration building. This is the most beautiful spot in all the fair, and visitors who appreciate magnificence and art such as even the Romans never dreamed of will not want to see this glorious spectacle while flying along on a railway train. Once within the magic charm of this place they will want to stay there for an hour, and this irresistible attraction will not be weakened by the flying days, but each recurring visit will add to its strength and fascination. At least, it is so with me. To this day I find it difficult to drag myself away from this unparalleled spot.

The way to see the lagoons, the ponds and particularly the grand basin and canal at which [illegible] this wonderful scene lies, is by the electric launches or Venetian gondolas. The launches are trim craft and they move over the water with amazing speed. In all there are nearly sixty of them, some with awnings and some without, each is thirty-six feet long, carries thirty [illegible] and is manned by a crew of two. One is the pilot, who turns the current on and off by moving a switch and the other is a guard who assists passengers in boarding or alighting, answers questions and once in a while pulls out a boat hook and helps shove the craft off a shoal which it has encountered in endeavoring to explore along the shore. At their highest speed the boats run ten miles an hour and in half an hour they can make the circuit of the waterways, giving the passengers at every turn a new view of the buildings and beauties with which the lakes are surrounded.

The power to run these boats comes from the great engines in Machinery hall. At night they are tied up to a convenient wharf and their batteries charged with enough of the subtle power to run them for fifteen hours during the following day. Early in the morning they are at their stations ready to receive passengers. Fifty cents is the charge for the round trip and shorter rides may be had for a quarter. But by all means take the round trip. It is worth the cost many times over. Inasmuch as the craft is not run at highest speed nearly an hour is consumed in the voyage of about four miles and in that hour you get a view of the exposition which cannot be rivalled from the solid ground.

At night the boats carry electric lights, arranged just as ships lights are arranged at sea or on the great American lakes, and this affords visitors a pretty object lesson in the method by which navigators avoid collisions and understand at a glance each other's course. The rule of the road at sea may be quickly learned by an observing passenger during one of these glorious night rides. After a hard half day's jaunt through the grounds and buildings I can find no greater enjoyment than a voyage by one of these swift and graceful launches with the spray flying, a cigar between one's lips, chatty companions near, the picturesque gondolas darting hither and yon over the well lit waters and all around the magnificent spectacle of the exposition at night with its myriad electric lamps, the search lights and the prismatic fountains. It is indeed like a paradise on earth.

The gondolas are very popular too. At first strangers were a little timid about trusting themselves to the gaudily attired sons of Venice who have been imported to manage these pretty boats. They were afraid of a ducking or of being held up in some dark nook at the point of a dagger or Sicilian knife. But such foolish fears are entirely groundless and no one should go away from the exposition without having enjoyed one of these novel and pleasurable rides. The gondolas are from Venice and so are the gondoliers. Everything is the real article, from the oars to the silk and satin canopies which spread their bizarre colors over the barges, from the cushioned seats to the guitars and mandolins which may be taken along in the evening. Every thing is from the city without streets.

There are sixty of the gondoliers and they have about thirty boats. Several of their craft are barges with canopies which remind one of Cleopatra's voyage down the Nile to meet Marc Antony or the procession of the Doge of Venice on fete day. The barges are manned by two gondoliers, and one or two of the larger ones by three. The gondola proper has but one man and he stands upon a little bridge in the stern of the strange craft and with a long oar which is shipped upon a mere hump or protuberance rows or sculls at a speed almost equaling that of the electric launches. Most of the gondoliers are young and trim chaps who know all the operas of their native lands and who can thrum a mandolin or sing a love song to the queen's taste when asked to do so and stimulated by the promise of a snug fee. They are picked men and among their number may be found the most skillful and speedy of all the race of gondoliers in their native city. Some of them have performed similar duty in other European cities and have managed to pick up a little English, French and German.

The uniform of the gondolier is brilliant and strong. No opportunity to display color in its composition was neglected. It is said to be the dress of the romantic period in the history of Italy—four centuries ago—and looks it. The trousers are of the knickerbocker order, tied at the knees with cord of silk and tassel of gold and striped perpendicularly with red and white. The jacket rather tight fitting is of red material and a broad belt showing all the colors of the rainbow appears to be the boatman's particular pride. On his breast is a large medallion and at his side a flowing sash. His sleeves are of the puffed pattern which the women will inspect with interest and his cap is a sort of fez with a very long and jaunty feather rising from it.

As yet there is considerable uncertainty as to the prices which the gay gondoliers are to charge. They appear to have a sliding scale, which slips along in almost any direction to accommodate the purse of the passenger. The plan most in favor with the manager is to rent a boat at about $3 an hour, permitting six or eight passengers to step aboard. With a heavy load two gondoliers are sent along but for smaller parties one suffices and then the charge per hour may be considerably reduced. The manager will no doubt find it to his interest to send some of his boats out to take passengers on the same basis as that adopted for the electric launches—and for the steam launches, which I had nearly forgotten to mention, as well—a quarter for a short trip or a half dollar for the round voyage.

The wheel chair's the thing for getting about the grounds and buildings with. There are 500 in use now and there will be 2,500 in all a month hence, when the big crowds are expected. They are pretty nice chairs, of rattan bodies, rubber tires and ball bearings and they run almost as smoothly as a bicycle. It is said the work of wheeling even a heavy man about for a day is not hard, and that the wheel-man as well as the wheeled man enjoys the exercise. The motive power [illegible] brains as well as muscle, for the men who propel the chairs are college students from Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Amherst, Chicago university, Michigan university and nearly all the other colleges of the country. The young men thus secured a chance to see the exposition without [illegible], and their pride suffers no fall whatever, the work being useful and honorable. They get $1 a day, a place to sleep, and admission to the grounds. Their tips will amount to a good deal, for they are handsome and intelligent young fellows who know how to be agreeable to well-to-do men, their wives and daughters. Look out for a crop of romances growing out of the employment of 2,400 college boys as motive power before the exposition closes in October.

The prices charged for the chairs will drive all romantic notions out of the heads of the papas and husbands who have to foot the bills. Look: Chair with attendant, 75 cents for an hour, 40 cents for half an hour. Chair without attendant, 40 cents an hour. Double chair for two persons with attendants $1 per hour, without attendants 60 cents an hour. If you want to go into the chair business wholesale you may have a chair with attendant all day for $6, without for $3.50. Even at these prices the chairs appear to be popular.

DENVER MINING STOCKS

DENVER, May 9 To-day was one of considerable excitement on change Anaconda furnished the sensational feature 23,300 shares changing hands on straight sales, in addition to the [illegible] shares sold on options This stock opened at 44c and closed weak at 41c Shortly after the opening [illegible] shares sold at 42½c [illegible] This was followed by a bid by Badgley of 45c buyer [illegible] for [illegible] shares or any part. The bid was promptly accepted by Roudebush, who sold the entire 10,000. This was followed by another bid at the same price for [illegible] more shares the same terms and it was quickly picked up by Roudebush Another [illegible] of 5000 shares was made by Roudebush to R H Buck at 48c, buyer 60c

The [illegible] of th[illegible] blocks broke the market and offers at 43 cash were freely made The closing [illegible] bid was 40 [illegible] Without question Roudebush sold short and this will certainly have a bull[illegible] effect on the market

Aside from the flurry in Anaconda there w[illegible] very little trading and the general condition of the market was slumpy

YOU GET STRONG, if you're a tired out or "run-down" woman with Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription And, if you suffer from any female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it don't benefit or cure in every case your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy?

The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor.

For ulcerations, displacements, bearing down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely and permanently cures.

This camp has been wonderfully developed during the past year, so to-day there are at least fifty mines that have been and are shipping pay ore to the stamp mills and smelters, and hundreds of good prospects that are pushing development work daily, so that by the time the railroads are completed into this camp many of them will doubtless be shipping properties of pay ore.

The [illegible] Stamp Mill is now completed, with all the known modern improvements for treating low grade ores successfully, and will begin operations May 1st, treating a hundred tons of ore per day.

The future of this camp is assured! We believe this is a good time to make profitable investments in many of the Gold Mining Stocks of this camp, and will take pleasure in furnishing the best information we have regarding the different properties. Call on or address

How Dr Depew Got Up a Speech

Before his death Dr Vermilye had for many years spoken to the toast "Holland" at the annual dinner of the organization. Some 11 years ago and on the morning of the day set for the banquet he was taken ill and notified the dinner committee that he would be unable to make his wonted oration.

At 4 o'clock on the same day Depew entered the office of John A Nichols at 71 Broadway, New York, wearing a worried expression and a perspiration bedewed forehead.

"Nichols," he said, "I'm in a fix and want you to help me out. The St Nicholas people have just wired me that in the absence of Dr Vermilye they look to me to respond to 'Holland!' I don't know the first thing about the subject, and it's 4 o'clock."

"Well," said Mr Nicholas.

"Now," went on Depew, "just you take me by the hand and walk up Broadway to Twenty-third street. Don't talk to me and I'll not expect to talk to you. Just steer me clear of people, mind I don't get run over at the crossings and go slow. That's all I want you to do."

Mr Nichols has reported and Depew did not exchange a word until Twenty-third street was reached at 5:15 p m.

"Thanks," said Depew as he parted with his friend. "I guess I'm all right."

At 7:30 p m, the first thing that the eyes of Mr Nichols met as he sat down at the dinner table was the bland, unruffled, smoothly shaven face of Depew. The speech that he made later is yet a delightful tradition in the annals of the St Nicholas society. It was chock full of wit, fact, figure and sentiment. Nobody but Mr Nichols dreamed that it had been [illegible] shaped and born amid the riot and roar of Broadway.—Brooklyn Chronicle.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING TALES OF ADVENTURE ON SEA AND LAND

The Charge on Randall's Battery by the Eleventh Alabama—How a Brave Southern Soldier Was Saved From Assassination by His Dying Rival

[Copyright 1893, by American Press Association.]

Private John N[illegible] of the Eleventh Alabama a brave [illegible] tell me a most remarkable and romantic story of the war. Although his narrative is weird and improbable [illegible] impossible, he vouched for the truth [illegible] every word and his bearing [illegible] earnest [illegible]

N[illegible] and I were smoking [illegible] cigars and watching the full moon rising over the bay [illegible] when our conversation drifted to topics of the [illegible] nature. [illegible] with the [illegible] light falling full on his face [illegible]

I [illegible] than those [illegible] facts [illegible] that there was [illegible] nevertheless [illegible] with [illegible] bewild[illegible] speak [illegible] but I have taken [illegible] to tell you the story if you care to listen.

I urged him to go on and he continued:

At the opening of the war I was [illegible] in love with Helen [illegible] As she was a most beautiful and vivacious girl it was simply natural I should not be the only one to admire her. She had plenty of suitors but most persistent among them all was Rafe Le Sarge, a dark faced dashing young fellow with French blood in his veins.

"YOU SHALL NOT LIVE TO HAVE HER!"

For a time Le Sarge treated me with cold politeness that was a trifle short of scorn, but an open rupture threatened and I expected to have to meet the fellow in a duel. I knew him to be a remarkable pistol shot and this caused me to practice assiduously with that weapon. This was not necessary however, for no duel resulted.

Lincoln was elected, Sumter bombarded and taken, and the southern states seceded. The war followed and every patriotic southern man flew to arms. It did not take me long to decide on the course I would pursue, but I could not bear the thought of going away without asking Helen to become my wife when I returned if I ever came back.

As I was riding to her home I was joined by Le Sarge, who was proceeding thither for the very same purpose. We seemed to divine each other's intentions immediately and I was ready to grasp my pistol the instant he made a suspicious move.

He did not make such a move. Instead he said,

"Nagley, we may as well let Miss Garvin settle this matter. We will present our claims and permit her to choose between us."

"I was not averse to this, for I was [illegible] she loved me, and I felt quite sure she had a disliking for Le Sarge. The [illegible] was not quite what I expected, for Helen, who was passionately devoted to her southern instincts, after listening quietly, declared:

"I will marry the one who most distinguishes himself by bravery and valor in this war. That is my answer."

"We were bound to accept this as final. Looking into Le Sarge's black eyes I knew I had a desperate and dangerous rival, for the man's nature was fiery and never for an instant did I doubt his courage. He would fight valiantly under any circumstances, and with such a prize in view I knew he would be a perfect tiger in battle.

"We entered the same regiment and fought shoulder to shoulder. Neither of us received a scratch until the battle of Frazier's Farm. We were both in the charge on Randall's battery, which had been annoying us excessively. I can never forget that mad rush over 600 yards of open ground with the guns of the battery belching grape and canister, shells howling through the air, bombs bursting in our midst and men being plowed down on every hand.

"But we were not to be stopped. Out of the woods we poured, and across the open field we charged at a dead run yelling like fiends. Right up to the guns we went, pistoling and bayoneting the cannoneers. The Pennsylvanians were gritty but they were finally routed. As they retreated a sudden [illegible] came over me. I felt a terrible pain in my side and fell unconscious.

"When I came to my senses I found myself in a temporary hospital with wounded men groaning, shrieking, cursing and praying on every side. Within four feet of me on the bare floor lay Le Sarge with two bullets in his body. I could hear him grind his white teeth and see his eyes roll with agony although it was growing dark in the room.

"All at once he sat up, fumbling in his pocket and producing something which he held in his right hand, dragging himself toward me.

"'I'm dying,' he hoarsely whispered. 'But you shall not live to have her!'

"Then I saw he held an open claspknife in his hand. I tried to cry out but something chained my tongue. I could not utter a sound. He reached me and lifted the knife to deliver the fatal blow.

"At that instant I saw Helen kneeling beside me and [illegible] my prostrate body to grasp Le Sarge's wrist—I saw her as plainly as I [illegible] you at this moment. Not only that, but the would be assassin saw her, for he fell back his eyes staring, his lips hoarsely whispering 'Helen—here,' and sank motionless by my side. The apparition vanished. Le Sarge died before morning.

"Now despite what I saw and despite the exclamation of my enemy as he sank unconscious I might have thought it all a trick of my imagination, but within 10 days I received a letter from Helen in which she said:

"'Last night I dreamed a terrible thing. I fancied myself in a dreadful place where dead and wounded men lay all around. In their midst I found you, dear John, sorely injured. Just as I knelt by your side I saw Rafe Le Sarge on the point of striking you with a knife. I reached across to grasp his wrist, but at that instant I awoke. I sincerely trust you are not harmed.'

"Explain it? I do not. It is an unsolved mystery, but I am satisfied that in some way Helen saved my life that night."

The Farmer and the Bicycle

I was pedaling my way through Maine on a high wheel when I stopped one night in the town of Harmony at the house of an old farmer who had never seen a bicycle before, although he had heard a great deal about them from his son, who was away at school.

"So that's one of them ere bisuckles Joe's been pestering me about," drawled the old fellow as he walked around the machine and inspected it with a critical eye. "He wants me to git him one of them [illegible] things, but they cost a master pile of money. I should think you'd fall an git scrunched, mister."

"It is easy enough to keep your balance after you learn how," I replied.

"Is that so?" he asked, glancing at me suspiciously. "S'pose I could l'arn to manage the tarnal thing?"

"Without doubt you could in time."

"How much'll you take for this rig?" he inquired as if struck by a sudden thought. "If I kin ride it, I low mebbe we kin make a dicker. W[illegible] a Joe [illegible] I'd like ter s'prise him by [illegible] out to meet him on a bisuckle. I w[illegible] swan. What d'ye say?"

Now the safety [illegible] a bad [illegible] pen[illegible] [illegible] was ready [illegible]

"I think [illegible]"

"At [illegible] cents? Co[illegible]"

"Not a cent less than fifty. It is as good as a new wheel."

"Say forty nine."

"Even fifty or [illegible]"

"[illegible]"

It [illegible] day [illegible] but [illegible] was [illegible] m[illegible] ride this [illegible]

[illegible] J[illegible] d[illegible] barn [illegible] or fall off [illegible]

But that [illegible] quest.

[illegible] bey? [illegible] knees [illegible] climb [illegible] [illegible] like [illegible] [illegible]

I moved the wheel [illegible] and he mounted to the saddle with great difficulty. [illegible] support [illegible] started off. [illegible] thought he was [illegible] balance [illegible] self [illegible] as soon as he started down a slight incline he shouted:

"Let her go!"

Involuntarily I did so. Down the slope scooted the wheel, gaining speed with each moment. [illegible] the old man clung firmly to the handles and kept from falling, but to my dismay I saw he was aiming straight for the barnyard fence, which was built of boards set upright and about [illegible] feet high. [illegible]

"Talk about [illegible]" shouted the elated old fello[illegible]

But [illegible] talk about it any more, for the [illegible] struck the fence just then, [illegible] he went [illegible] through the [illegible] disappearing from view.

I [illegible] the fence and looked over [illegible] the [illegible] where he [illegible] sprawled face downward. He was a pitiable looking object and he was so mad he could only splutter and shake his fist at the infernal machine.

"It's your own fault, Eb Jones," declared his wife, who had come running out to see if he were still living. "Didn't I tell ye? Your didn't ye?"

Then she proceeded to give him such a tongue lashing that he grew meek and humble, sneaking away to the house to wash himself and change his clothes.

Through the kindness of Mrs Jones I remained there that night, but the old farmer was sulky and sullen the entire evening. I didn't sell him my wheel, but when I was ready to depart in the morning he took me aside and said:

"I hain't holdin no grutch, mister, but I hope you won't tell none of the neighbors. I 'low I made a howlin fule of myself, but I'm goin to load up my old gun an the next man that tries to ride inter this ere yard on a bisuckle does so at his peril."

An Outlaw's Cunning

While I was in Kansas last year I heard a story of the nerve and cunning of Rube Burrows, the Missouri outlaw who met such a tragic and merited death. There was a price on his head and he was hunted from place to place, but he had managed to elude or stand off pursuers at every turn. Among those hot on his trail was a sheriff named Stiltson, and this man finally tracked Burrows to the toolhouse of an abandoned quarry, where the fugitive had spent the night.

Burrows was sitting on the half broken head of a small keg, calmly enjoying a smoke, when Stiltson appeared in the door, leveling a cocked rifle straight at the outlaw's breast and commanding him to throw up his hands.

The entrapped desperado knew a move on his part to draw a weapon would be fatal, but instead of lifting his hands he deliberately took the pipe from his teeth and held the smoking bowl over a break in the head of the keg which could be seen between his legs.

"Pull trigger and you'll be blown to h—l in a second," he declared. "This keg is half full of powder and I'll drop the pipe!"

The sheriff was startled, and following up his advantage swiftly Burrows ordered Stiltson out of the shed, swearing he would drop the pipe if the officer did not retreat instantly. Stiltson retired and watched the door, waiting for his game to appear.

In the meantime Burrows jumped out through the one window and made good his escape. The keg was found to be entirely empty.

WILLIAM G PATTEN

Delivering a Telegram.

A man went with a telegram to an office in Broadway. It was midnight. Handing the paper to the fellow in the cage, he said:

"I want that delivered at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning."

The fellow in the cage said: "We can deliver it within an hour."

"I don't want my friend aroused at 1 o'clock in the morning. Send it away from here at 7, so that he will get it at 8."

The fellow in the cage was puzzled. "We don't do business that way," he declared. "I wouldn't know how to fix it so as not to be delivered at once."

After a great deal of cogitation a bright idea struck him. "If you pay the tolls on the words 'Don't deliver till 8 o'clock,'" he said, "that will do it all right."

And so the customer paid the extra toll. But did the scheme work? Not much.

Within an hour a messenger boy arrived with the dispatch at the house of the sender's friend. He rang the bell for 10 minutes. Then there came a policeman who asked what the matter was. The messenger boy said he guessed some one's wife must be dead, as he had an important message that had got to be delivered at once. So the policeman hammered at the side of the house with his nightstick and aroused every one in it, about 30 all told.

In the midst of the uproar the dispatch was delivered to the person for whom it was intended. Trembling at the fear of a great bereavement, he opened it and read as follows:

"Will expect you to dinner Tuesday. JIM."

The messenger boy went back proud of having done his duty, and the fool telegraph company increased its capital by $3,000,000 the following day.—New York Herald.

Rare French Shooting

An enthusiastic French marquis met a friend in Paris and offered him a few days' shooting on his estate. The invitation was accepted and the man set out the next day. The journey was seven hours by rail, but to a true sportsman that was nothing.

The next morning the visitor was waited upon by the marquis' keeper and the day's sport was mapped out.

"To begin with," said the keeper, "we will go into the vineyard where at this season we shall be sure to find some thrushes."

And after that [illegible] when the prospect [illegible] birds was not very [illegible]

"Ah well, after that we will spend awhile on the open plain, where there will be plenty of larks. Then I will show you some moor hens that I know of. Down there in the marsh, too, I saw a fox last year [illegible] will look him up. Perhaps he is there still."

"But have you no partridges?"

"Partridges? Yes, indeed. We have them, but they are not so easy. We had four but a month ago monsieur the marquis killed one and badly wounded another. The poor creature hasn't yet recovered. That leaves only two. We will go after them of course if monsieur wishes, but then what shall we do next year? Now if monsieur will only finish the wounded one that would be just the thing."

"Well, well, but have you no covert shooting—no hares?"

"Hares? Certainly, certainly, we have hares. I will get the dogs and we will go into the woods. You shall see some beautiful hares. We have three, Josephine, Alphonse and the old Adolphe. [illegible] being Josephine is sacred. She has little ones. The [illegible] that he is the father of a family. We will spare them of course, monsieur, but we will [illegible] time. I have been [illegible] him for five years."—Artistic Travel.

MOHAMMEDANISM.

A RELIGIOUS SOLUTION OF THE SOUTHERN NEGRO PROBLEM

Such It Is Suggested May the Teachings of Mohammed Webb Prove—Something About the Religions of Other Lands—Buddhism and Hindooism

A [illegible] Mr Mohammed Webb [illegible] try [illegible] look [illegible] the [illegible] sits [illegible] the Mohammedan faith. [illegible] make proselytes [illegible] with at [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] than [illegible] Christian [illegible] do [illegible] and missionaries [illegible] and Central Asia. The Mohammedan religion has [illegible] and has [illegible] There are [illegible] that we shall not [illegible] It is true that more [illegible] [illegible] from [illegible] rel[illegible] of Islam [illegible] happiness [illegible] does not enter into it [illegible] the soul [illegible] synthetically [illegible] Mohammedan harem [illegible] in hand.

Among the foremost [illegible] commend Mohammedanism to a large proportion of our citizens is its staunch devotion to abstention from strong drink. Belief in God is admitted [illegible] As in Buddhism, kindness to all animals is commanded. Its [illegible] purgatory is picturesque [illegible] bad souls alike have to cross the bridge Al Sirat, that spans hell and is described as finer than a hair and sharper than the edge of a sword. Many a believing Christian will take comfort in the thought that the Mohammedan finds it quite as difficult to gain the kingdom of heaven as do the [illegible] Predestination was a cardinal doctrine of the prophet, but we Christians have been wont to ascribe its promulgation to the political motive of rendering his followers contemptuous of danger and suffering.

The Mohammedan religion is simple enough and is divided into faith and practice—the latter including prayer, almsgiving, fasting and a pilgrimage to Mecca. Taken by and large, it is a thoroughly practical religion for the races who lead nomadic lives and one preeminently calculated for propagation at the sword's point. It is the latest of all the great faiths of the world, only dating back to 622 A D, while Buddhism is probably of 1,200 years earlier origin and Hindooism 600 years earlier still.

There is just one field in this country for the introduction of the simple and trusting faiths of the east, and that is the great negro population of the south. The hearts of the lowest types of the colored races are receptive and naturally religious, and any faith new to them that will supplant Voodooism ought to be welcomed by the stanchest Christian. There are today 1,500,000 of believers in that strange and disgusting mysticism.

The southern negro must have a religion of pure credulity, with plenty of rewards and the mildest possible punishments. Buddhism, whose adherents today number more than one-third of the human race, might suit him did it only promise a heaven or some equally attractive future abiding place. But it offers nothing better than extinction—no God, no soul, no hope, save annihilation! It is a dream of peace of eternal sleep, Nirvana coming to the believer like the snuffing out of a taper. Buddhism never has been a religion of fanaticism, but has always been charitable and tolerant.

If the millions of negroes in the gulf states, who are today in the greatest intellectual and moral ignorance, could have formulated for their use a new creed uniting some of the beautiful teachings of Gautama and Mohammed, they might be guided in the direction of purer and nobler lives. Christianity could come later if they felt the need of it, but we do not believe that any man or woman who knows the facts regarding the class to which we refer will deny that Mohammedanism or Buddhism, properly introduced and preached, would advance the condition of that part of the negro race. Great schools like the Vanderbilt and Lincoln universities and the institution at Raleigh do not reach the rice fields of Georgia, the cotton plantations of South Carolina or the swamps of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Here are great missionary fields, and, without prejudice, they can be honestly recommended to the advance guard of the beneficent missionary hosts that may be expected to flock to this country if a Mohammedan or Buddhist propaganda be decided upon. Julius Chambers in New York Recorder.

APROPOS OF HOMEMADE CLOTHES

"Abe's a growin boy now, an I reckon I'd better cut this suit o' clothes good an large to allow for his fillin out an lengthenin," remarked Mrs. Davis briskly as she stood shears in hand in front of the dining room table on which the cloth for Abe's new suit was spread out.

Abe looked wistfully at his father.

"Well now, Marthy," said Mr Davis mildly to his energetic helpmate. "I dunno's I'd cut it so much to fit Abe ef I was you. Boys are pooty hard on their clothes anyway, an I calculate by the time Abe has growed too tight to be comf'table into that suit it'll be about wore out."

Mrs Davis looked doubtfully at her husband. He had not a reputation for great liberality, yet here he was advocating a plan which was almost certain to result in a year's waste of good cloth, for Abe had no younger brother to take his outgrown clothes.

"Ye see," began Mr Davis again, feeling that he was the object of embarrassing scrutiny from his thrifty spouse, "I allus recollect a boy that was raised in Endervine, not fur from where we lived till I was well inter my teens.

"His mother made it a practice to 'allow' on that boy's clothes the whole durin time, an it was a dreetful trial to him, I can tell ye. I—I knew him pooty well, bein raised in the same town ye see.

"He was a kind of a pindlin lanky boy an would 'a' looked extry good anyway, but his clothes allus hung off'n him jest as ef he'd been left out in the rain sometime an hed shrunk.

"His mother wa'n't a master hand at cuttin anyway—not anywheres near as good as you be, Marthy," said Mr Davis, feeling that here was an opportunity for a handsome compliment, which was received with an air of conscious worth by his wife, "an it was a sorrerful sight to see that boy!

"He never caught up to the size of his garmints to my knowledge, never! An other boys used to poke fun at him cons'able—boys whose mothers wasn't quite so forehanded in their idees an cuttin.

"An I've heerd his father say again to me, referrin to 'that boy,' the way he looked, that he viewed it more things w[illegible] spilled all ways than was ever w[illegible]
